ABSTRACT

The invention proposes an apparatus and method to automatically discover port mapping between neighboring optical nodes in a switched optical network. It can also be used as a diagnostic method to find faulty connections and channels. It is assumed that each node has a switch that can connect any ingress port to any egress port in the node.